FROM FATHER'S DESK

Father Nathaniel Meyers

Those who know me, know that I hate spiders. How much do I hate spiders? Well, recently I was reading an article that stated a world without spiders would result in a famine that would kill approximately three billion people. As I reflected upon this, I thought, "Okay, but that means the four billion survivors would live in a world without spiders—not bad." Obviously, I joke and realize it would be horrible to lose three billion people, but that indeed was my first thought anyway. I just simply cannot stand spiders and have absolutely no compunction about killing any and every spider I see so that they can be sent straight back to Hell from whence they came!

Yet, despite this intense arachnophobia on my part, I have to admit that they are a creature of God (though part of me does want to think there were no spiders before Adam and Eve's fall from grace, so they belong purely to the fallen world) and do fulfill a purpose in His creation. No doubt each of us would like to change something about the created world—whether it be getting rid of mosquitoes or making sure there are no tornadoes or eliminating even the possibility of cancerous cells—and the fact is that all of these proposals always have some kind of horrible tradeoff that would result in a massive decline in human life. For me, making peace with a world full of spiders is ultimately about coming to accept and surrender myself to God's Providence.

Whenever the thought occurs to any of us to get rid of some part of the created world or to fundamentally alter the way in which things work (for example, wouldn't it be great if ice cream and cookies actually lowered cholesterol and built muscle?), we are in essence saying that we could create a better world than God did in making this one. I imagine none of us actually thinks this when we put it into clear, concrete terms such as I did just now, but nonetheless that is what we are doing with such thought experiments. Instead of dreaming of our own perfect world, perhaps our imagination would be better employed by envisioning how we can live perfectly within the world God has gifted to us. During the final half of summer, let us each marvel at God's creation and consider how to better align ourselves with it.

In Christ,
Fr. Meyers

CATHOLIC Q & A: ROMAN COLLAR

Question: Why do priests wear a Roman collar?

Answer: The practice of priests wearing the Roman collar developed in the mid-nineteenth century as an alternative to wearing the cassock which in some places was seen as impractical or which was even outlawed by anti-Catholic legislation. The Code of Canon Law simply observes that priests wear "suitable ecclesiastical garb" according to the judgments of the national bishops conferences and local custom (no. 284). The US Bishops have instructed that outside of liturgical functions, a "black suit and Roman collar are the usual formal attire for priests. The use of the cassock is at the discretion of the cleric."

In the end, the goal of their clerical clothing is to serve as a sign of their commitment to guide and to serve, and to also allow them to be truly public figures because they are ordained for the service of all.
