FROM FATHER'S DESK

Father Nathaniel Meyers

Imperceptibly, the days are getting shorter. I never really notice the loss of sunlight until October, mostly because the heat and the humidity make it feel like the sun is just as powerful and present as ever even as its actual appearance in the sky is receding. Of course, even the sun's position in the sky really doesn't have anything to do with its own internal mechanics and place in the solar system. The sun isn't rising or setting either, but it certainly appears as though it is to our naked eye. Such is the nature of perception—how we perceive things (or whether we perceive them at all) largely shapes our sense of what is happening, but appearances can be deceiving.

Far too often each of us, myself very much included, can draw unjustified conclusions from what we perceive to be the case. Whether it is a story in the news or the actions of a neighbor or a comment from a family member, it is easy to take our perception of the situation in question and impose upon it a sense of omniscience. However, when we dig deeper into the situation, we inevitably realize there was more to it than we initially thought. The fact is that in our life, none of us knows all the relevant details or even necessarily which details are relevant. Our knowledge is forever incomplete and imperfect, because none of us has the capacity to know all things.

According to the forecast, this upcoming week is going to be a hot one with minimal chances of rain, so each of us is probably going to think of just how intense and overwhelming the sun is right now. Yet, as we know from astronomy, the day is giving way to night more and more each day. Perhaps this seeming incongruity can help all of us to remember that perception is not everything and our quest for the truth requires careful, ongoing inquiry.

In Christ,
Fr. Meyers

CATHOLIC Q & A — WEDDINGS

Question: This time of year, I attend a lot of weddings. Why do Catholic weddings need to take place in a church?

Answer: Technically, there is a clause in Church law that could allow for weddings to take place outside of a church, in a suitable space under special circumstances, but it requires the rare permission of the bishop. But the meaning of marriage goes very, very deep, and the Church has a vested interest in protecting that meaning. As Catholics, we don't see a wedding as an event that needs a pleasing backdrop.

Marriage is a sacrament, both an occasion of joyful promise and symbolic solemnity. It is a spiritual event. The loving bond of marriage symbolizes the mystical union between Christ and his Church. The man and woman profess lifelong vows of fidelity, and they receive supernatural grace from God to keep their promises. Receiving the sacrament of Marriage in a church has broader symbolic meaning for the couple as well. Marriage isn't simply two people in isolation from the world around them. Marriage is the joining of families and the beginning of a new, holy mission in the life of the couple. Weddings are sacred occasions, and it's fitting that they occur in sacred spaces.
